ENGLISH SYNDICATE

About to Buy Coal Fields in East Tennessee and South Kentucky.

Thousands of Acres of Coal Lands Along the Southern Railroad and Considerably Over a Million of Dollars are Involved in the Enterprise.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 9.—An immense deal, now in process of consummation, by which all the coal mines and lands in east Tennessee and southern Kentucky, lying along the line of the Cincinnati Southern railroad, will shortly pass into the hands of a big English syndicate, came to light Tuesday.

The information is furnished by Mr. Robert Walton, manager of the Rugby Land Co., the English company which built the pretty little city of Rugby, in east Tennessee.

Mr. Walton states that an agent of a big combination of English capitalists is now en route to England, bearing with him options on all the mines and the best coal lands in the section named, and that if his report is satisfactory to his employers, as it doubtless will be, deals will be closed with the present owners at once. The agent has been at work securing the options for some time past, but for various reasons, has kept his movements secret.

The idea of the English capitalists is to secure a monopoly of the coal business in this section, and to put all the mines on a paying basis. The trades for the mines along the Cincinnati Southern are to be closed first, and the Jellico and Coal Creek mines will likely be secured later.

Thousands of acres of coal lands and considerably over a million dollars are involved in the deal.

LABOR RIOT.

One Man Killed and Two Others Seriously Injured at Minonk, Ill.

PONTIAC, Ill., June 9.—A serious labor riot occurred at Minonk. The coal miners have been on a strike there since May 1. During last week a few men have been working against the wishes of the majority. Tuesday, while Superintendent A. W. Morgan, and one of the bosses, Joseph Erbland, were escorting one of the men to work, a crowd of miners interfered. A fight ensued and Morgan and Erbland commenced to shoot, killing instantly a young married miner named John Wesloski, and wounding another. This so enraged the miners that they attacked Morgan and Erbland with clubs and stones and beat them badly. Morgan may not live. The town is excited and there is no telling where the trouble may end.

The death of Superintendent A. W. Morgan, which occurred late Tuesday afternoon, apparently satisfied the desire for revenge on the part of the enraged strikers. No further trouble is now apprehended.

IRON HALL TAXES.

The Supreme Court Declares Marion County Has the Right to Collect Them.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 9.—The supreme court Tuesday reversed the decision of the lower court in which an injunction was granted forbidding the county auditor and treasurer from collecting taxes against $323,847 Iron Hall funds which Receiver Failey held in deposit in the banks in this city.

The appealants contended that the taxes should be assessed against the 45,000 members of the order, scattered over the country.

The decision Tuesday holds that as the property is in the hands of the receiver in this state, it comes within the jurisdiction of the state. The taxes amount to $8,626.96.

Minister Angell Postpones His Departure.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., June 9.—Dr. Angell, who was to have sailed for Constantinople on Saturday to assume his post of minister to Turkey, announced Tuesday evening that he will postpone his departure for a week in order to finish his work in the university as lecturer upon international law. He may possibly remain longer to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the college commencement.

Many Desertions in the Navy.

BOSTON, June 9.—More than three score men have recently deserted from the warships New York and Massachusetts, together with those who left the Texas while she was here last week. Twenty-eight men took French leave of the Texas and 30 are missing from the New York. It is not known how many more are missing from the Massachusetts. In every case the deserters are of foreign birth.

Killed Her Lover.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 9.—Florence Williams killed her lover in McDowell county Tuesday evening after a heated quarrel and escaped. Both are members of prominent families. There is much excitement over the matter. The man was killed in a fit of jealousy, and was, at the time, preparing to take up a large tract of timber land to make ties for the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad.

Disturbance on Account of the Octroi Duties.

VALENCIA, Spain, June 9.—Serious disturbances have occurred at Benicalo and Cheyla, this province, on account of the Octroi duties. At Benicalo a man attempted to blow up a house with a bomb, but it exploded prematurely and dangerously wounded the man.

Yellow Fever on Board.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A special to the Herald from Lima, Peru, says: The steamer Santiago, from Panama, which arrived in port at Callao, has been ordered to quarantine, having yellow fever on board. Augustin Olessi, a passenger from Panama, is so seriously ill with the fever that it is believed he will die.

Struck for Nine Hours.

BOSTON, June 9.—In compliance with the order of the union, the sheet and plate glaziers of this city, struck Tuesday night to enforce a nine-hour work day.

FOR RUIZ'S DEATH

A Demand for Full Reparation Will Be Made on Spain—There Will Be No Indecent Haste or Bluster by the President.

NEW YORK, June 10.—A Washington dispatch to the Herald says:

"A demand for full reparation for the Ruiz outrage will be made by the president, but there will be no indecent haste nor unnecessary bluster in Mr. McKinley's representations to the Spanish government."

This statement was made by a cabinet officer.

The Spanish government is preparing its side of the case. Dr. Congosto, who represented the Spanish government in the investigation, will arrive Thursday with his report, which takes a directly opposite view from that of Consul General Lee. This will be submitted to Minister De Lome, who, after viewing it, will submit a report to the Spanish government.

Senator Foraker, of Ohio, of the committee on foreign relations, said: "Consul General Lee's report simply confirms my opinion in regard to the death of Dr. Ruiz. I have never had a shadow of a doubt that he was killed in prison, and that the Spanish government was responsible for his death. This government should at once demand indemnity from Spain, and should take such a firm and decided stand that there would be no danger of any other American citizen in Cuba being subjected to such treatment."

MAHER-SHARKEY FIGHT.

Police Interfered at the End of the Seventh Round—A Draw.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Peter Maher and Tom Sharkey fought Wednesday night at the Palace Athletic club for a $15,000 purse. At the end of the seventh round the police interfered and the contest resulted in a most unsatisfactory draw. Never in the history of the ring has there been such an enormous attendance at a boxing bout in this vicinity. There were about 10,000 persons squeezed in the big building at 107th street and Lexington avenue.

A more representative congregation of well known sporting men has never witnessed a boxing mill than that which assembled at the club house Wednesday night. The quantity of money which would have changed hands had the bout resulted in favor of either man is well up in six figures.

Those arrested, including the principals, seconds and referee, were escorted to the One-Hundred-and-Fourth street police station, first allowing Maher and Sharkey to go to their dressing rooms and put on their street clothes. All furnished bail. So far Brady has not been arrested.

IN A DILEMMA.

To Hang or Not to Hang Durrant, Is the Question.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Warden Hale, of San Quentin, conferred with Attorney General Fitzgerald Wednesday as to his position with regard to the execution of Theodore Durrant, but after being closeted together for two hours both officials declined to be interviewed as to the conclusion reached by them. Durrant's attorneys protest entire unconcern as to what the state officials intend to do with their client, claiming that the warden dare not proceed with the execution after being served with a notice of appeal to the supreme court of the United States, and threatening in the event of Durrant being executed, to proceed against the warden and governor upon charges of conspiracy and treason. It is considered as very unlikely that Durrant will be hanged Friday under the existing circumstances.

HOT WEATHER

From This On Predicted by Weather Prophet Hicks.

ST. LOUIS, June 10.—"Look out for hot weather from now on," said Prof. Hicks, the weather prophet, Wednesday. Between the 10th and 13th is the Vulcan storm period. This period is coincident with the regular magnetic disturbance central always about June 11. It is natural to expect, therefore, between the 10th and the 14th, much lightning, many showers and sudden gusts of wind. While there will be many electrical displays in the sky during the next few weeks, they will not be of the dangerous nature. The storm clouds, too, will be seen to move erratically through the rest of the month.

Fatal Accident in Boston.

BOSTON, June 10.—An accident by which several persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, occurred Wednesday by a collision between an express team and an electric car at the corner of Bromfield and Washington streets. The car struck the rear of the heavy team, which was pushed violently against the crowd of passers-by, catching them between the wheels and a fence, which surrounds a new building.

Negro Killed by a Mob.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., June 10.—Wm. Andrews, colored, alias "Cuba," was taken from the officer at the door of the courthouse and killed by a mob. Andrews had been Wednesday tried, convicted and sentenced to death for feloniously assaulting Mrs. Benjamin T. Kelley, near Marion, on May 5. Judge Bage, who passed the death sentence upon Andrews, endeavored to reason with the excited crowd, but in vain.

Child Plays With Matches.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., June 10.—While attending to her household duties Wednesday afternoon Mrs. J. A. Maranda, of this city, put her three-year-old daughter to bed for a nap. The child when left alone obtained some matches, set fire to the bed and was burned to death.

The Blow Was Fatal.

MARION, O., June 10.—Mrs. George Klingle, residing near Waldo, died of lockjaw, the result of a blow received about three weeks ago. Her husband struck at a cow with a club, but missed and struck his wife in the face.

NO DOUBT

The President Will Soon Take Action on the Cuban Question.

The Spanish Mission Considered at the Cabinet Meeting—Failure of the Republican Caucus to Act on the Hawaiian Treaty Causes Comment.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Assistant Secretary Day said Tuesday that the report of Consul General Lee upon the results of the investigation made in Havana in the Ruiz case, had not yet been received at the state department. Consequently it was not possible to learn whether the publications purporting to be copies of the report were accurate. Assuming, however, that the consul general's conclusions are correctly set forth, in brief, that Ruiz died while in jail, in violation of his treaty rights, the question of the largest importance is, what shall be the next step? The wife of Ruiz has filed with the department a claim for $150,000 for the death of her husband. The Spanish contention has been that he was not killed and that he was not treated harshly. Gen. Lee's inquiry is understood to have failed to bring out the truth on these points, but his statement on another, namely, that of his confinement in violation of treaty rights, appears to make the first two points non-essential and to leave the case resting on the broad claim that in confining Dr. Ruiz for more than 72 hours without permitting him to communicate with his friends or trying him, the Spanish officials in Cuba have assumed full responsibility for the results of that extra confinement. The fact being established that Dr. Ruiz kept up his citizenship by registering himself at American consulates in Cuba from time to time, as required by regulations, is taken as an offset against the claim that by continuous residence in Cuba for nearly 20 years, he had forfeited his rights as an American citizen, so it is surmised that the next step in the case will be the presentation of a claim against the Spanish government in behalf of the family of the victim of this illegal imprisonment.

The cabinet meeting Tuesday lasted longer than usual. The Cuban situation was discussed in a general way but the most important subject presented was the Spanish mission. The availability of three men for this important post at Madrid was carefully canvassed, but no decision was reached. One of the cabinet officers said after the meeting that the selection was still open and will go until the president's return from Nashville trip. It may be that the non-appearance of Mr. Calhoun may have had something to do with postponing action. Tuesday. If Mr. Calhoun does not have an opportunity for a talk with the president before Mr. McKinley's departure at noon Wednesday he will be invited to accompany the president on his trip. A berth has been reserved on the train to be placed at his disposal in case he joins the presidential party.

The failure of the republican caucus Tuesday to take steps looking to the protection of the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty has caused considerable comment, but the friends of Hawaii in the senate say that the omission was due to no other reason than the want of sufficient time. They feel confident that if the point had been reached an amendment similar to that proposed by Senator Davis continuing the treaty in force would have been accepted. They base this assertion upon the manner in which Senator Frye's speech was received and the side remarks made upon the subject. They now express the utmost confidence that the finance committee will accept the amendment without cause action.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—There was a revival of Cuban talk about the senate Tuesday on account of the return of Mr. Calhoun. The republican senators, some of them members of the foreign relations committee, say there is no doubt that the president will take action as soon as Mr. Calhoun's report is received. No definite information was given concerning the attitude of the president but the impression of the senators from such reports as they heard was that there would be a change from the present negative policy and the adoption of a definite line of action with a view to endeavoring to secure a settlement of the present unfortunate state of affairs in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—W. J. Calhoun, of Illinois, the special commissioner sent to Cuba by President McKinley, arrived from New York Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. He went immediately to Judge Day, the assistant secretary of state, who was awaiting him, and together they proceeded to the white house. They were shown into the cabinet room where President McKinley and Judge Day listened to Mr. Calhoun's description of the situation in the war-ridden island and to the conclusion reached by him.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The republican senatorial caucus Tuesday voted to stand together on all schedules in the tariff bill. The caucus committee to report a new sugar schedule.

The new sugar schedule is to be all specific and on all sugar which has gone through a process of refining 1.95 cents (one and ninety-five hundredths of a cent) per pound duty instead of one cent and eight hundred and seventy-five one-thousandths of one cent per pound as provided by the house.

President of Monmouth College.

MONMOUTH, Ill., June 9.—Rev. D. T. McGill, of Allegheny, Pa., was elected president of Monmouth College Tuesday afternoon to succeed Rev. J. B. McMichael, D. D., whose resignation was presented Tuesday morning. Dr. McGill is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson college, Pennsylvania.

Commander Ewingate Dead.

MALDEN, Mass., June 9.—Commander George Ewingate, U. S. N., of the Charleston navy yard, is dead. He was born in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1837, and had been in the service since 1862.

Dr. Angell May Not Go to Turkey.

DETROIT, Mich., June 10.—The News correspondent at Ann Arbor quotes Dr. Angell as saying that he may not go to Turkey as United States minister. Dr. Angell declines to say why the matter is still in doubt.

THE COMMITTEE

Agrees to a Number of Amendments in Agriculture Schedule.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The senate committee on finance has agreed upon a number of additional amendments to the agricultural schedule, the most important of them relating to fish as follows:

A new paragraph on canned fish is to be recommended as follows: "23—fish known or labeled as anchovies, sardines, sprats, Brislings, sardines or sardine, packed in oil or otherwise, in bottles, jars, tin boxes or cans shall be dutiable as follows: Containing 7½ cubic inches or less, 1½ cents per bottle, jar, box or can; containing more than 7½ and not more than 21 cubic inches, 2½ cents per bottle, jar, box or can; containing more than 21 and not more than 33 cubic inches, 5 cents per bottle, jar, box or can; containing more than 33 and not more than 70 cubic inches, 10 cents per bottle, jar, box or can, in other packages 40 per cent ad valorem. All other fish, except shell fish, in packages 30 per cent ad valorem. Fish in packages containing less than one-half barrel and not specially provided for in this act, 30 per cent ad valorem."

The rate on pickled or salted herring is increased from one-half to three-quarters of a cent per pound, and on fresh herring from one-quarter to one-half cent.

The following substitute is made for paragraph 238:

Fish, fresh, smoked, dried, salted, pickled, frozen, packed, on ice or otherwise prepared for preservation not specially provided for in this act, three-quarters of a cent per pound; fish skinned or boned, one and one-quarter cents per pound; mackerel, halibut or salmon, pickled or salted, one cent per pound ad valorem."

A new paragraph on chocolate was agreed to as follows:

"Chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for, valued at not over 15 cents per pound, 2½ cents per pound; valued above 15 cents and not above 24 cents 2½ cents per pound, and 10 per cent ad valorem; valued above 24 and not above 35 cents per pound, 5 cents per pound and 10 per cent ad valorem; the weight and value of all coverings other than plain wooden boxes shall be included in the dutiable weight and value of the foregoing merchandise. Powdered cocoa un-sweetened, 5 cents per pound."

The paragraph relating to extracts of meat was amended so as to provide that the dutiable weight of this article should not include the weight of the package in which it is imported. The house rate of one cent per pound on edible berries which the committee originally struck out is restored and cranberries are specifically added at 25 per cent ad valorem.

The rate on chicory root was fixed at 2½ cents per pound, the house rate being 3 cents and the original finance committee rate 2 cents.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—In the appointment of John G. A. Leishman, of Pennsylvania, Wednesday, to be minister to Switzerland, the president has turned down Brutus J. Clay, of Kentucky.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The special train conveying President McKinley and his party left Washington for Nashville at noon Wednesday over the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad. The private car of President M. E. Ingalls, in which Mr. McKinley and his immediate party traveled, was fragrant with gigantic pots of roses and other flowers. There were also flowers in the car occupied by the cabinet and the invited guests. The train was in charge of W. H. Gregor, agent of the railroads, and the side rooms were occupied by the members of the cabinet and the invited guests. The train was in charge of W. H. WASHINGTON, June 10.—The tariff commission league has opened headquarters in this city. Samuel B. Archer, secretary and treasurer of the league, will be in charge. The object of the association is to secure the passage of a bill for the appointment of a tariff commission whose duties will be to suggest to congress changes in rates of duty and thus take the tariff question out of politics.

Chinese Drowned in a Gale.

VICTORIA, B. C., June 10.—Meager particulars were brought by Empress of Japan of a disaster which befell the fishermen of Chusan Archipelago, off the coast of China. On May 6, while all, or at least most, of the fishing boats were out on the fishing banks, a terrible gale sprang up. Of the several hundred boats out at the time very few returned, and it is estimated that some 500 men lost their lives. The storm swept over the entire archipelago. Several large junks were lost, in which scores perished.

A SONG OF LABOR.

In days of old the saber
Gave honor to the hand,
And those that did not labor
Were princes in the land:
To-day has crowned with glory
The brow bedewed by toil;
The theme of song and story
Has risen from the soil.

No more are felt the shackles
That once held man a slave;
The furnace fire that crackles
Has melted sword and glave.
O frenzied all, and brothers!
Find joy in what you do;
The happiness of others
Is laid in trust on you!

O worker! see the beauty
You're building to the skies;
Along the path of duty
You're nearing Paradise!
The flowers of art that blossom
In column, spire and dome
Shall lie in Labor's bosom
And beautify her home.

And Peace shall come, and wonder
Shall fill the world anew—
Eternal arms be under
To waft you dangers through.
The sun will shine still brighter,
The stars will sing and shine,
The burden will be lighter,
For labor is divine.

CAPTAIN CLOSE

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

(Copyright, 1894, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

Lambert stood speechless one instant. Then, raising his forage cap, he whirled about and left.

The boy was thinking of his own mother when he tripped so lightly up that worn old gravel path on his way to inquire how he could be of service to one whose dignity and sorrow and suffering had so impressed him. He had donned his best uniform for the mission, and little dreamed how in so doing he had rendered himself much the more persona non grata. He, who could not bear upon women and children under any circumstances, had not begun to learn how bitterly the recent war had borne upon the women of the south, or how, even so long after, they suffered from its effects. He had gone to offer the aid and protection of loyal heart and a strong arm, and had not realized that it was the very last succor a Walton would seek, so long as both heart and arm were draped by the union blue.

Not ten minutes after his return, discomfited and dismayed, there rode up the muddy, red bridlepath—for it was little more—a broad-faced young fellow who was attired in the clumsiest of "store clothing" and whose lean and long-necked steed looked dejection itself as his vigorous rider dismounted, slung the reins over the gate post, and, after one sharp and warning survey of the silent negroes still hovering about, swung cheerily up the walk. To him the old doors opened wide without a summons, and eager hands were thrust forth in welcome.

Lambert, hearing the first heavy drops come thumping on his canvas roof, thought it was the rain that so quickly thinned the group of darkies on the road. He could hear the mule-hoofs sputtering away through the mud as the rain came quicker and faster, but not until several hours later did further explanation dawn upon him. Then he heard Burns and Watts in conversation at the first sergeant's tent.

"Did you see how the niggers kind o' lit out when he came?" asked Burns. "I haven't seen him around here since August. Reckon he knows captain's away. He hates him like poison ever since cap interferred in that row he had with Parmelee."

"Looks like a pleasant enough fellow. I'd rather back him than Parmelee any day, far as looks go. What's he doing here?"

"He's some kin to the old lady—they're all related hereabouts—and she's sent for him to come, probably, after last night's row."

"But they're talking all over the company about Murphy's yarn—about there being some relative there—some man—last night. You heard it when he talked to the lieutenant."

"Oh, yes," answered Burns, evasively, "I heard what he had to say, but Riggs shut him up short as soon as he was sober enough to know what Murphy was saying. Wait till Riggs tells his side of the story to the lieutenant. Then perhaps we'll know what brought Mr. Barton Potts over here."

Lambert was up and at the door of his tent in a minute. "Did you say that Mr. Barton Potts was at the Walton place now, sergeant?"

"Yes, sir," answered Burns, whirling about in the mud and promptly saluting.

"Then he will have some man let me know when he comes out. I wish to speak to him. And if Riggs is sober enough now, send him here."

Presently, looking moist, bear-eyed, and dejected, the ex-trooper and sergeant was marched up through the patterning rain, and, with the big drops trickling down from the visor of his old war-pattern forage cap, stood suddenly at the tent of his young commander. The guarding sentry, after the fashion prevailing among some of the regular infantry at the time, allowed his rifle to topple forward from the "carry" into the grasp of the left hand, a foot or so in front of the right breast, and with this well-intended effort at the "rifle salute" of the '60's, Private Mulligan reported—

"Prisoner Riggs, sorry to speak to the lieutenant."

It was the first time Lambert had conducted an investigation of the kind, and he had no precedent to guide him.

"Riggs," said he, "Murphy tells me your going to town last night was at the instance of some relative of Mrs. Walton's who asked you to do them a service. Was that true?"

"It was, sir."

"Then he will doubtless be glad to come forward and exonerate you, or at least explain your conduct in the early evening. Your later conduct only a court-martial can properly consider. Where is this gentleman?"

"I don't know, sir."

"What is his name?"

"I—can't tell, sir."

"You know it, do you not?"

"I suppose I do, sir, but—I can't tell it."

"In the event of your trial he is the only man who can help you, and the report I have to make of your misconduct is most serious. Drunkenness only aggravates house-breaking and attempted robbery, as well as assault."

"I broke no houses, sir, and attempted no robbery. As for assault, the lady herself will say I meant no harm."

"But your own comrade admits he found you in the cellar entrance at the foot of the steps, on premises you were forbidden to enter, to all appearances stealing wine, and he was striving to get you away when the noise brought Mrs. Walton upon you. The case is flagrant."

Riggs threw his hands forward in a despairing gesture, dropped them again by his side, and stood silent.

"Do you mean you have nothing to say for yourself?—that you cannot disprove the charges?"

"I have plenty to say for myself, sir, but nobody to say anything for me. The worst anyone can ever prove of me is that I've been a drinking man. I'm no thief; I'm no burglar; and I'd burn me hand off before I'd lay it to hurt a woman, old or young. I never knew what I was doing, if I grabbed the lady by the throat. But I'd be a worse man than the lieutenant thinks me if I do what he asks."

"This is nonsense, Riggs. What have I asked you to do that would be either criminal or wrong?"

"To defend myself at the expense of a friend, sir," said Riggs, with melodramatic gravity. "I'll never betray the man that's trusted me."

"Take him back to the guard tent, sentry," said Lambert, hardly knowing whether to be amused or disgusted. "The man isn't sober yet."

And then for the first time the young officer became aware of the presence of a horseman at the side of his tent. With his hat brim pulled down over his eyes and the rain dripping from bit and boot and bridle rein, there sat his acquaintance of the owl train—Mr. Barton Potts.

"One of your men said you wished to see me, Lieutenant," said Mr. Potts, with a courteous wave of his hand. "I was coming anyhow, but rode round from the bahn yawnduh and came in 'long the branch. Excuse me if I've stumbled on something I wasn't expected to hear."

"Certainly, Mr. Potts. Can you mount and come in? I much want to talk with you."

"And I want to have a talk with you, lieutenant—ve'y much—and I'm coming for the purpose, but not just now. There are some matters I must tend to in town for my aunt, Mrs. Walton, at once. But let me add my thanks to hers—and much more than hers—for your prompt assistance last night. I know that man by sight. I've seen him around here befoh, and it's Gawd's mercy I wasn't there last night. I'd 'a' shot him dead."

"You can be sure he shall not escape justice, Mr. Potts, though your aunt seems to refuse to see me with regard to the matter."

"I'll explain all that later, suh," said Potts, lowering his voice. "I've simply got to go at once. But I'll see you tonight, and meantime let me repeat what I said. You shan't lack for a friend round heah, suh. You treated me like a gentleman when I was drunk and possibly offensive—though I hope not, suh—and you've behaved like a gentleman to my people, and by and by they'll see it. Just you wait. By the bye, you remember Col. Scroggs?"

"I don't think I do. Some of that name were among the prisoners who escaped yesterday, I'm told."

"Yes, suh. The same family, suh; Col. Scroggs' brothers. I can't discuss them just now, but if the colonel should come here to see you before Capt. Close gets back, if you'll take my advice you'll listen to him. He wants to speak about that arrest and square things; and—well, I know a gentleman when I see one, just as I know a rough—like that soldier you were examining. The colonel was conductor of our train night before last. Now I've got to ride like hell. Good day, suh."

And, pulling off his hat and sticking spurs to his mud-covered steed, Mr. Potts galloped away along the Tugalo road into the gathering darkness.

Soon after nightfall the rain ceased and the wind died away. For the first time since he had turned in the night before Lambert brought him of the lantern he had purposed buying, even if he had to send to Cohen's on a Sunday. Burns sent some candles over from the company stores and the young German "striker" set two of them alight in his tent, with empty whisky bottles—off which he had deftly washed the labels—as candlesticks.

One thought led to another. The proposed purchase reminded Lambert that all the money in his possession was now the $20-bill borrowed of Close, and this reminded him that he wanted five dollars in small currency—"shinplasters," as the miniature greenbacks were called at the time. Since hearing Murphy's story he better understood the straits to which his neighbors were reduced, and he had determined that the aid he had proffered in one way should, despite madame's high-spirited rejection, be rendered in another.

At eight o'clock he had secured the amount he needed through the good offices of the first sergeant, and he was wondering how soon he might expect the visit of Col. Scroggs and what could be its purpose, when all of a sudden the clatter at the other end of the camp told him of the return of the detachment sent out the previous night; but it was Sgt. McBride, not his company commander, who met him at the tent door.

"The captain's compliments, an' he'll be back by an' by, sir. He stopped over to have it out with somebody that foold him."

"Stopped over where, sergeant? Not alone, I hope?"

"No, sir; the sheriff was along, an' two others. They were talking with Mr. Scroggs—or Col. Scroggs—and a young fellow they called Potts, who met us across the track on the Quifman road. The captain said you wasn't to worry about him, but we didn't get to the parties the sheriff was after, and the captain thinks he knows who threw us on the scent."

Manifestly nothing was to be done but await the captain's return, and nine o'clock came without him. Lambert had determined to investigate the butter market, however, and time was not hanging heavily upon his hands by any means. Throwing a light-blue overcoat, such as was worn by the rank and file, over his uniform, he sailed forth just after nine o'clock, and made his way around the camp until he reached the road, and followed it to the hedge. The next instant, with brilliant flash, the glare of a parlor match leaped out one second on the night and fell full on a laughing, handsome young face peering in from under the visor of an infantry forage cap. One second only, and down went the match, and with stifled cry bounded the youngest daughter of the household of Walton—even the precious pail forgotten.

But Kate was fumbling for something in her pocket and bending forward to the hedge. The next instant, with brilliant flash, the glare of a parlor match leaped out one second on the night and fell full on a laughing, handsome young face peering in from under the visor of an infantry forage cap. One second only, and down went the match, and with stifled cry bounded the youngest daughter of the household of Walton—even the precious pail forgotten.

Ten minutes later a horseman came galloping up the muddy road and inquiring for the lieutenant. Lambert recognized him as one of the deputies or assistants engaged in Saturday's affair at the jail. He handed a folded paper to the young officer, and, in low, excited tones, began some explanatory comments.

"Wait," said Lambert. "Let me read."

Tearing open the paper, by the dim light of Burns' lantern he made out the following:

"Lieut. Lambert: Post guard at once around Walton place, so as to prevent any men from getting in or out. Take half the company if you need it. I'll be there in half an hour."

"Wh' ab' you?" she painted. "That's not Sgt. Riggs." A window was suddenly raised back towards the house; the mournful toot of a tin horn began "Quick! Ab've got to go. Roll that pail through. Why didn't Mr. Riggs come?"

"He's detained—on duty, but it's all right. Where's the buttermilk?" Through the trees behind the girl came Elinor at top speed; one could hear the rattle rods away. "F' Gawd's sake Mis' Katie, come quick. Mis' Walton's callin'."

But Kate was fumbling for something in her pocket and bending forward to the hedge. The next instant, with brilliant flash, the glare of a parlor match leaped out one second on the night and fell full on a laughing, handsome young face peering in from under the visor of an infantry forage cap. They have good reason to respect the bear of Yezo, which is a huge and ferocious animal, closely resembling the American grizzly. It does not hesitate to attack man, and when hungry it sometimes enters dwellings in search of food. On the other hand, the hairy people are brave hunters, and, though possessing no better weapons than bows and arrows, they do not hesitate to assail the brute. The arrows are poisoned, and a mere puncture of the skin is so fatal that bruin will surely fall dead before he can run 200 yards.

This poison is prepared from young roots of the aconite plant. Ordinarily the hairy people use it for set bows in the woods. When a bear comes along and steps on a cord, an arrow is released and enters the flesh of the animal. In parts of Yezo the forests are dangerous to travelers by reason of these set bows. Bears are extraordinarily numerous on the island, and they furnish clothing as well as food to the inhabitants. Bear gall, too, is greatly prized as a medicine.

Thus the hairy people regard bruin with the highest respect, giving him a place of honor in their pantheon. To propitiate him and to atone for having put his brothers and sisters to death, they hold periodic feasts, the most important feature of which, oddly enough, is the sacrifice of a young bear. There is eating and drinking and dancing for several days, at the end of which the bear is crushed to death under a big log, upon which the merrymakers mount. Finally, the animal is cut up and eaten, and its skull is placed on the sacred hedge which is found on the east side of every house.

It is a great honor to be the giver of a bear feast. Only a comparatively rich man can afford it, because the host must pay for everything, and immense quantities of rice brandy, or sake, are consumed.

At the end of winter a baby bear is caught and placed in a cage of logs. At first it is suckled by some woman, usually the wife of the captor, and later on it is fed with fish. The festival takes place in September or October, by which time the captive animal has grown so big and strong as to threaten to break out of its prison.

The ceremonies are elaborate, but consist most importantly of drinking and dancing. For awhile the woman who served as wet nurse for the bear sits aside, sorrowful, having a quasi-parental feeling toward the victim.

At length young bruin is taken out of the cage by three or four strong young men, who lead him around for a time.

Then he is made a target for arrows which, instead of pointed heads, have blunt wooden ends decorated with bits of red cloth.

Next, the animal is taken before the sacred hedge, a log is laid upon him, and the men mount upon the log, crushing the poor beast to death.

Meanwhile the women dance around, with lamentations, striking the men, to manifest their indignation at such cruelty.

Finally the body of the victim is laid on a mat near the hedge, and the men proceed to get helplessly drunk.

On the following day the bear is cut up, its blood being caught in cups and greedily drunk. The liver is taken out, chopped into small pieces, and eaten raw, with salt. The flesh and entrails are put in the house, to be divided among the participants in the feast next day. An opening is made in the skull, through which the brains are removed, and the latter are passed around in cups, mixed with sake. Finally, the empty skull is filled with shavings and raised on a pole above the sacred hedge.

The men of this hairy race have such enormous mustaches that they are obliged to hold them up, when eating or drinking, by means of flat wooden implements shaped like paper cutters.

Their hair and bushy beards are never combed or cut. These people are of small stature, though rather bigger than the Japanese. They are brown, but their exact shade is impossible to tell, inasmuch as they never bathe or wash.

The girls are good looking, save for tattooing about the mouth. It begins when they are six years old, and as they grow older it is gradually extended until it forms a broad band all around the mouth. The tattooing is done by scarring with knives and rubbing soap into the cuts.

The hairy people weave a coarse kind of cloth from the fiber of the bark of the mountain elm, and their principal garment is a long coat of this material.

In winter their clothing is of skins, for the climate is cold, and they have waterproof shoes of fish skin for traveling over snow.

Their houses are thatched with reeds or straw. The fireplace is a depression in the middle of the hut, and a hole in the roof affords an exit for the smoke. At night a primitive lamp, consisting of a large mussel shell, a wick and some fish oil, gives some light.

The only musical instrument properly belonging to them, and not derived from the Japanese, is a species of jews-harp made of bamboo. Cakes of dried lily roots are favorite edibles. These savages marry early. Polygamy is permitted, but it is not much practiced.

Sexual morality is not strictly enforced among the unmarried. Thieves are punished by beating with clubs. A murderer is bound to a cross for a week, and, when then released, takes his place as an honorable citizen.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Absent-Minded.

The palm for absent-mindedness is probably taken by a learned German, whom a Berlin comic paper calls Prof. Dusel, of Bonn. One day the professor noticed his wife placing a large bouquet at his desk. "What does that mean?" he asked.

"Why!" she exclaimed, "don't you know that this is the anniversary of your marriage?"

"Ah, indeed, is it?" said the professor, politely. "Kindly let me know when yours comes round, and I will reciprocate the favor."—Tit-Bits.

The Republicans are in no measure responsible for a surplus in the Treasury at this time. The Government's revenue is due to Democratic legislation, and the only thing the Republicans can claim credit for is the heavy increase in imports, due to the anticipation of a high tariff. Shiftless Rufe's Lovemaking.

BY PAUL DANBY.

(Copyright, 1897.)

IT was the year I built my store and got the Corners post office, which, by the good will of providence and my friends I've held ever since, no matter who was "in" at Washington, that I first took notice of Shiftless Rufe Dunning. He lived with his father and mother just across the flats at the foot of West Hill in the edge of the Big Woods. You know, all this region was pioneered late, and although nearly everything was cleared up on this side the valley and the pine timber had long been cut off the flats, there was a heavy growth of mixed hardwood and hemlock to the west that stretched away back I don't know how many miles. Here and there the little "openings" on the side of West Hill log houses were still to be seen and the folks living in them were sometimes pretty primitive.

The Dunning's were probably the most no-account of the lot. They lived in a little shanty old Rufe had knocked together out of slabs given to him by the sawmill boss. They had only a little patch of ground, and they lived on what they raised, the fish they caught and what they trapped and shot. They didn't steal, as I know of, but they were all mortal shiftless, and young Rufe was worse than either his father or his mother. In fact, he was so all-fired lazy, if I must put it that way, that even the old man felt discouraged about him.

Young Rufe was 22 before anybody suspected that he could possibly have any ambition at all. But one day he saw Kitty Sylvester. She was the daughter of the first manager of the big Barkley estate. Old man Barkley—the grandfather of the present Barkley, who never comes near the estate—had just put the place in a manager's hands and moved away with his family. Now, Kitty was a real sensible, go-ahead girl. She knew the Sylvesters were as good as anybody round the Corners, if not a little better, and she tried to live up to the family reputation in all ways. When a girl, her mother had been famous for the work she could do, and Kitty was not a bit behind. Every morning in the winter she was up early and got breakfast by candle-light. All day long she wove carpet, or quilted comforters, or spun stocking yarn, or did something else that counted. Every morning in the summer she was up with the sun, and every day when it went down she had churned and worked more butter or made more cheese, or in some other way done more work than any woman anywhere around could do. And she was the savviest girl in the county. Everybody said the was the smartest young woman going, and, naturally, she was considered a highly-desirable catch. But she held herself mighty shy of them all for awhile, and it was regularly given out that no young man need ever think of keeping company with Kitty Sylvester who wasn't fully her match both at working and saving. So when it was noise about that young Rufe, of all the world, had got him a pair of fine boots, a ruffled shirt, doskin pantaloons and a broadcloth coat, and had begun to shine up to Kitty, there was a general roar. Folks couldn't believe it at first, but it wasn't anywhere near as hard to swallow as what came afterward.

You see, the out-giving that had been made about the kind of chap Kitty's husband would have to be had sifted the young fellows out a whole lot. Most of them were willing to work and willing to save, and they all admired Kitty; for she was as good looking as she was industrious and frugal, but her standard was so high it scared the boys, and beau's got to be mighty seldom on the estate.

Now, as it turned out, Shiftless Rufe thought more of Kitty than any of the others, and at the very beginning she gave him a little encouragement. Not much, to be sure, but enough to reform him completely. He was naturally mighty bashful when he called at the big house, all fixed up in clothes he wasn't used to, and Kitty at first pretended she didn't understand that he had come to see her.

"I'll call my father," she said. "Perhaps you want to talk about cutting some cordwood."

"No," said Rufe, directly. "I want to know if I can keep company with you."

The girl was startled by his failure to beat about the bush, but she answered quite as directly:

"Certainly not. You're too lazy to be allowed to keep company with anyone." Then an idea flashed through her mind. "But if you'll cut cordwood a whole year, every day but Sunday and holidays, you may come and see me—just once. Here comes father, and you'd better make arrangements to cut for him on shares."

To Kitty's surprise, Shiftless Rufe stood his ground, and when her father came in started at once to discuss the proposed arrangement.

"Wal, Mist' Sylvester," said Rufe, grasping the old man's hand. "I ain't never been no great hand to work, but I must have a chance to keep comp'n with Kitty, and she says I may come and see her after I've chopped cordwood a year. It won't be no fun, but I must have Kitty and if I've got to work to git her, why, then I have, and that's all there is about it."

Sylvester was at first inclined to be angry at Kitty for trifling with Rufe, but concluded to humor the situation, I hour under the same roof with her.

and bidding Kitty leave the room, told the young man he was ready to make a bargain with him.

"You can cut cordwood off the estate, on shares, Rufe, of course, if you want to, and I'll set aside some trees, right near your father's shanty on the other side of the flats. But you want to take off them fine boots and them doskin pants and that there broadcloth coat, and you don't want to put them on again, till you've worked hard a whole year. You're too shiftless to be allowed to think a single minute about Kitty now, and I suppose you always will be, but—"

"You needn't say no more, Mist' Sylvester," put in Shiftless Rufe. "But I can't see Kitty again just long enough to say good-night?"

"Yes," said the old man, "you may, and I'll tell her we've made the bargain she suggested."

Then he called Kitty into the room. As she entered, she noticed for the first time that Rufe, dressed up, wasn't at all bad looking, and that he seemed twice the man he had been before. She kept perfect silence till her father had finished. Then she reached out and took Rufe's big, soft paw in her own small hand—a hand that was calloused with hard work in spite of its littleness.

"Mr. Dunning," she said, "I hope you'll keep your bargain faithfully as I shall keep mine. After you have worked hard for a year you may come and see me once. Whether you may come again or not will depend on yourself. Good evening, Mr. Dunning."

Nobody had ever called Shiftless Rufe Mr. Dunning before and the title scared him far more than the notion of working every day for 12 long months. From the time he left the big house that night he was fit to drop the title "shiftless." Next morning, as soon as it was light, the sharp ring of his ax was heard across the valley, biting out the chips as he chopped down the first tree of his year long stent. Long before noon that day his big, pulpy hands were blistered and swollen and by sundown they were a sight to behold. That night his mother cried over them and urged him to stop

Nobody knew then how this devotion of her once shiftless, no-account lover affected Kitty Sylvester, but we learned afterward that the sound of his ax from morning to night echoing across the valley became as music in her ears, and that the light of his candle shining through the trees in the mornings and the evenings was delight to her eyes. At last the long winter, with its cold, its storms and its darkness, wore away, the spring passed and the summer with its heat came on.

"Now Rufe'll weaken," said the loafers about the store. "It's all right to work hard when it's cold and the air is bracing, but he'll let up in the hot weather, sure."

But they were wrong. All through the heated term Rufe's ax gave noisy notice that he was still working, and when the fall began it was still biting out chips and splitting up lengths. At last the year was nearly up, and old Sylvester had begun to ask himself whether he had not made an exceedingly bad bargain after all. For Kitty was plainly much interested in the patient lover who had toiled so long and so steadily for the privilege of calling on her "just once," and it might be, the old man reasoned, that she would allow him to call the second time, and perhaps a third, and perhaps—but the thought was too awful to entertain and the old man strove to dismiss it. Failing in that he questioned the girl, who refused to answer satisfactorily and the two had a quarrel in which Mrs. Sylvester joined, taking Kitty's part most vigorously.

On the last day of the stipulated 12 months Shiftless Rufe went to his work early and began with quick, eager strokes to cut a big hickory. He had become an expert axman by this time and the sun was not yet high in the sky when the big tree came down with a crash. It so happened that I was over in the big woods that day with a neighbor looking at the timber. We heard the tree fall and at the same time a scream as if a strong man were in mortal agony. In a hurry I ran in the direction of the sound, guided by thinking about the proud, stuck-up girl on the other side of the valley.

"The ideal!" muttered the old woman between whiffs at her clay pipe, while she dressed Shiftless Rufe's hand. "Do you think Kitty Sylvester will look at you just because you've been fool enough to work a whole year? Why, it's puffed up like a balloon. I'll know you was a little light in the head, Rufe, but I didn't think you'd make a fool of yourself for no conceited Sylvester girl."

To this and much more of the same sort, both from his father and his mother, Shiftless Rufe made no reply, but while yet the next morning was gray the sound of his busy ax went on unceasingly. When the days were shortest in the middle of the winter, he sometimes began before daybreak and worked after dark, splitting the "lengths" he had chopped from the felled trees into "four-foot wood," by the light of a tallow dip stuck into a tin lantern of the pattern so common when the "Corners" was new, but now rarely seen.

Before spring folks got to going by Rufe's ax and lantern in beginning and leaving off work morning and nights the same as they go by the big tannery whistle down the valley now and nobody who began work as early as Rufe did and worked till Rufe's lantern was out at night was counted lazy.

And Rufe did more than chop cordwood that winter. He learned to read, and this, both his mother and his father considered a far more "ridiculous" proceeding. Yet more; he went to meeting every Sunday as regularly as the most pious and thrifty of the whole neighborhood. Not that he became especially religious so far as I know, but by going to meeting he could get a glimpse or two every Sunday of Kitty Sylvester, and it was a little thing indeed for the man who was chopping cordwood a whole year that he might make one call on her, to listen to a sermon once a week so that he could sit for a whole low moans that followed the shriek. There, pinned under a branch of the fallen tree lay Shiftless Rufe, badly crushed and barely conscious. For the first time in the entire year he had mis-calculated in felling his tree. As quickly as we could my neighbor and I cut away the branch and released the young man. Then we got together a stretcher of boughs on which we proposed to carry him home. As we lifted him he opened his eyes.

"I wish—you'd take me over to Sylvester's first," he said, faintly. "I want to call on his daughter. She said I might come to-night—and so did her father—and—maybe—if you take me home before I go there I won't be able to see her to-night at all."

So we carried him across the flats to the big house on the Barkley estate. Part of the way he was quite unconscious and part of the way he was practically delirious, but when we reached the house he was quite rational, though very weak. And so it was that I was present when Rufe Dunning made love to Kitty Sylvester. His love-making didn't take long, for his strength was about gone, but he had time to say what he wanted to say and to hear what he wanted to hear. And when, after a long look into Kitty's eyes, poor Rufe peacefully closed his own, his big hand, no longer soft and pulpy but sinewy and strong, clasped her little one in the clasp of an accepted and acceptable lover.

The Cigar Mouthpiece.

A rich Russian banker had been discovered murdered in his house in St. Petersburg. There was no clew, but in the room there was found a cigar mouthpiece containing part of a cigar of such an expensive kind that it was supposed the banker himself had been smoking it just before the crime had been committed. On close examination the mouthpiece was found to be worn away by the teeth of its owner, but the dead man's teeth did not fit the indentation. The servants were one by one examined, and it was then found that the hollows of the mouthpiece compared exactly to the formation of the front teeth of the cook, to whom no suspicion had been attached. He afterward confessed to the murder.—Green Bag

ANCIENT CITIES.

The Oldest in America, Europe and Asia.

Chicago is by far the youngest city of its size on the globe. It can claim an existence of but 93 years at most, counting from the year 1804, when the government established a fort on the bank of the Chicago river. This military post was called Fort Dearborn and formed the nucleus of the future town. But for the first 30 years or so after the building of the fort a few small frame houses and a tavern were all there was of Chicago.

Even the city of Washington is older than Chicago. The capital city may be said to date from the year 1800, when the seat of government was moved there from Philadelphia, making it 97 years of age. Detroit is much older than either of these. On our next birthday, the 24th of July, the existence of Detroit will have extended through 196 years.

A number of cities along the eastern seaboard are still older. Philadelphia is 214 years old, Boston is 267 and New York 274. Few American cities can claim greater age than these, the two most notable exceptions being Santa Fe and St. Augustine. The former is 315 years of age and the latter, distinguished as the oldest city in America, is 332 years old.

But, old as they may seem, the greater number of the large cities of Europe and Asia are much older. St. Petersburg is the one exception, having been founded by Peter the Great in 1703, and is consequently but 194 years of age. Venice was first settled in 452, 1,445 years ago, by fugitives from Padua, who sought refuge among the swamps and morasses of the Adriatic from Attila, "The Scourge of God," and his horde of barbarian Huns.

Both London and Paris date from still earlier times. It is over 1950 years since Caesar visited them and brought them under the world-wide dominion of Rome. But at that time they were nothing more than little collections of mud huts inhabited by rude and uncivilized Britons and Gauls.

The city of Marseilles, on the southern coast of France, has been in existence 2,497 years. It was founded by a colony of Greeks when Rome, the future conqueror of both it and Greece, was nothing but a tiny village with a rule extending but a few miles into the country immediately surrounding it. Rome is about 2,650 years old. Of all the cities that were in existence when it began, and still retain their places on the maps, Rome is the most flourishing and best preserved. It has gone through so many wars, sieges and captures without being destroyed that it is called "The Eternal City."

But Rome is by no means the oldest city on the globe, or even in Europe. Athens, the capital of Greece, is about 3,453 years old, older than any other European city. Tangier, in Morocco, is probably over 2,700 years of age, having been founded by the Phoenicians about the time they colonized Carthage and other neighboring sites. Alexander, in Egypt, is not so old, its age being 2,229 years. It was founded by Alexander the Great, from whom it received its name.

Several Asiatic towns are credited with continuous existences covering longer periods than those of Europe or any other part of the world. Peking, the capital of China, is said to be about 3,000 years old or more. Jerusalem, which was the Jebusite city in the days of Abraham, is 3,900 years old at least. But there is one other city, and probably only one, that surpasses even Jerusalem in antiquity. This is Damascus, a city in Syria, once famous for its manufacture of silks, jewelry and arms. A Damascus blade was prized as superior to all others. They are no longer made, the method by which the armorers of Damascus tempered the steel being one of the lost arts. Damascus contains between 150,000 and 200,000 inhabitants, who carry on considerable business with the surrounding country by means of caravans. Their bazaars are numerous and interesting. The exact date of the founding of Damascus is not known, but it is said to have been begun by a great-grandson of Noah. It is probably 4,200 years old at any rate, and the oldest city in the world.—Detroit Free Press.

BUILDING MATERIAL.

Nickel Steel Lighter and Stronger Than Any Other Now in Use.

Nickel steel is considered the building material of the future. It is produced by the combination of iron and nickel, and the principal condition for a successful alloy is the purity of the nickel used. The latter metal is found mostly in Canada and New Caledonia, and the reduction of the ore has been, of late, greatly simplified. Most of the New Caledonia product is melted in Germany, while that from Canada is exclusively exported to England and the United States. Nickel steel, while somewhat lighter in weight than steel, is two or three times as strong; its power of resistance and its resiliency also exceed those of steel. These properties permit a considerable saving in dimensions, and thereby in weight and cost, as compared with similar constructions of ordinary steel. Its principal uses are armor plate for men-of-war, boiler plates, especially those for marine engines; screw propellers for ships; wires for submarine cables, also wires for rheostats, etc., on account of their excellent power of resistance; gun barrels and guns; the more important parts of locomotives and pins and couplings of railroad cars. Quite recently nickel steel has been employed in the production of bicycles, and a German wheel built of this material and tested for its strength, compared favorably to bicycles made of common steel, while its weight was less than two-thirds of the latter, or 12% pounds.

To Kit's surprise, Shiftless Rufe stood his ground, and when her father came in started at once to discuss the proposed arrangement.

"Wal, Mist' Sylvester," said Rufe, grasping the old man's hand. "I ain't never been no great hand to work, but I must have a chance to keep comp'n with Kitty, and she says I may come and see her after I've chopped cordwood a year. It won't be no fun, but I must have Kitty and if I've got to work to git her, why, then I have, and that's all there is about it."

Sylvester was at first inclined to be angry at Kitty for trifling with Rufe, but concluded to humor the situation,

WATER IN PASTURES.

How to Construct a Good Tile Well at Small Expense.

A convenient and cheap watering place for stock in pastures, away from the barn, through which tile drains run, may be made for a considerable part and often the whole season in the following manner: Three or four feet from the main drain dig a hole deep enough so that two barrels may be placed one on top of the other, the top of the lower one coming about level with the bottom of the main tile; this position for the lower barrel will bring the upper one usually a few inches above the top of the ground.

Connect the main tile to lower barrel with a few lateral tile of small size laid on slight incline and passing through the side of the barrel. Through these side tile the water will run from the main drain and keep the lower barrel nearly full of water at all times when there is the least flow in main drain.

Remove the bottom of top barrel before putting in position.

Better not use salt barrels for the top ones, as stock will destroy them more or less; kerosene barrels well burned out are excellent.

A pump may be used in this well or the water easily dipped with a pail by hand or with a short pole.

This arrangement prevents any refuse matter getting in the main drain, and if the well is covered none can get in it.

In the accompanying illustration the lower barrel is cut in two, showing the depth of water. BB shows the barrels. A main tile, C, conveying tile.—Alonzo Stansel, in Western Rural.

SCIENCE OF MILKING.

There Are But Few Men Who Understand It Thoroughly.

It is not everyone that can milk a cow as it should be done. Some can milk two cows while another is milking one. The operation should never be hurried; neither should it be done slowly; but the milk should be drawn steadily as it flows. Some cows have tender teats, and in milking too rapidly the operation is likely to be roughly done, or if too much prolonged the cow gets irritated. A cow that is naturally impatient and fretful does not like to submit to rough handling, and if continued her disposition will soon be ruined by such treatment. The constant practice of being milked at regular times soon impresses itself strongly upon her, and she will readily submit without trouble. As the udder becomes distended with milk, it is a relief to her to have it drawn out. When the udders are filled to the utmost with milk they become painful, and if not relieved the cow becomes restless. If this happens frequently or for any considerable time it will cause the cow to dry up prematurely. Milk the cow dry. The last portion of the milk is the richest and best. In most cases neglect to milk regularly and clean is one cause of the cow's drying up early, of giving bloody milk, of garget and other evils. With kind treatment, regularity in feeding and milking, the cows will not only become gentle and stay so, but will give milk longer, and the season's product will be larger. A really good dairy cow is too valuable to be given anything but the best treatment.—St. Louis Republic.

ENLARGING THE UDDER.

Why the Best-Paying Cows Are Found in Grass Countries.

The relaxation of the udder sack becomes so conspicuous in large milkers, in some instances, as to make it evident that the combined influence of expansion and weight tension together have overborne the natural contractile force of the udder skin, thus permanently enlarging the bag by destroying, or, at least effectually suspending, its natural and necessary contractility. This result is clearly shown in the uncontracting bags of cows that are dried only with great difficulty and breed but seldom, or fail to breed at all. The skin or sack of the udder is, of course, thinned down, as yield and size of bag increases, and this, when carried to excess or effected too rapidly, is doubtless the chief cause of loss of contractile power in the udder skin. Increase of feed being the cause of increased yield, such feed as adds to the bulk of blood increases yield and the size of the udder together. This succulent feed, like grass and roots, tends to enlarge the yield and the bag, and in this will be found a reason for the largest milk-producing cows being generally found in the best natural grass localities, in both dry and humid climates. Thus the best grass countries in America do, or surely will, with equal care and training, produce the largest and best yielding cows as a rule.—Plowman.

Hint for Orchard Planters.

Inexperienced orchard planters usually manifest an inclination to plant large trees, whereas an old and successful planter would probably select one or two-year-old trees. The latter are, we think, more certain to grow, and often make the more symmetrical appearance, for the orchardist can begin their training at an earlier age. Large trees lose more of their fibrous roots when moved than do smaller ones, therefore do not take hold upon the soil so readily nor grow off so vigorously.—Agricultural Epitome.

PLANTING FORESTS.

Hundred Men Can Plant 1,000 Acres in About 30 Days.

Robert Douglas, the pioneer nurseryman of Waukegan, Ill., has nurserymen of his own experience that it is not only easy to plant a forest of 100 or 1,000 acres in a season, but that it is also possible to make it pay—for the planter—that is. It pays richly for the owner later. He is not inclined to glorify the European forestry, as some of our Americans do. If the Europeans had the task of setting out forests upon our treeless western prairies, they would find it harder than maintaining a standing army.

Americans can, however, manage the task, because they do things by the large. They cultivate by horse and steam power instead of by hand power. The forest trees should be planted in rows and tended like orchard trees. In selecting trees to plant those native to the locality, if there are any, should have first consideration, as these will surely thrive best. Many growths that do well in the east are not suitable for the west. "Western trees for western planting" is the motto, because western trees are the surest. The green ash, for instance, makes a fine and vigorous growth in the west, while in the east the white ash is far superior to it. The chestnut has been thoroughly tried in the west, and has been found wanting. The pines and other conifers of the Pacific slope will not grow at all in the prairie belt, although the conifers of the Rocky mountains will.

Mr. Douglas finds that 100 men can plant 1,000 acres of forest in 30 days. The ground should, however, have been previously prepared. Either autumn or spring will do for the planting. In spring the seeds of the trees should be sown so soon as frost is out of the ground. By fall they will have made growth sufficient for transplanting to the forest that is to be. Forty acres will grow seedlings enough to plant 1,000 acres.

The farmers of Kansas have set out in the past few years 147,340 acres of forest. Among them are 11,500 acres of black walnut, 12,486 acres of maple, 2,637 acres of honey locust and 55,553 acres of cottonwood. The cottonwood grows the quickest and makes fuel for the farmer sooner than any of the others, hence his preference for it. Land prepared as for corn planting will grow the seedlings.—Norwich (N. Y.) Sun.

A MARKETING WAGON.

Good Thing for Farmers Who Sell Their Own Produce.

Many gardeners and farmers have discovered that much more money is made by selling their produce at first hands from door to door than by selling to merchants or commission men. A convenient wagon is of the greatest importance if one is thus to market his produce. Such a wagon is shown in the cut given herewith. It is "low-hung," and has its lower part boxed in and floored over. Access is had to this enclosed space by raising the driver's seat in front, by a door on each side in the middle, and by two doors in the rear. At one side two drawers are shown. One of these is most convenient for carrying the flat parchment covered prints of butter to market, carrying the drawer to the customer's door to avoid handling. The other can be used for eggs, using the ordinary pasteboard fillers placed one upon another. The rear can have drawers or not, according to the nature of the produce to be carried.

Above the rear doors are two metal "open work" doors, that hold in the vegetables or other articles that are piled loosely in the wagon's top. The center of this top space is easily reached from the canvas door in either side. The top is, of course, covered with canvas, and should have the name of the farm painted upon each side, with the nature of the goods carried. This will advertise and enlarge one's trade.—American Gardening.

New Facts About Trees.

It seems to be well understood that a man is taller at morning than at night, but it has remained for a young woman named Fry to discover that the boughs of trees hang much higher in winter than in summer. Doubtless the low hang of the summer is because of the weight of the leaves, but it is a surprising thing that the difference is so great as reported by Miss Fry. She found that a certain branch of a mulberry tree was 31 inches higher in December than in August, and a weight of 35 pounds was not enough to make the bough assume its August attitude in December.

Calendar for Fruit Growers.

W. N. Mitchell, commercial freight agent of the B. & O. R. R. in Atlanta, has just issued a very unique calendar for the fruit and vegetable growers of the southern states. It is one of the cleverest methods of advertising that has been put out in the south. It is full of attractive illustrations, and also contains a complete almanac and pictures of the watermelons sent by Mr. Mitchell to presidential candidates McKinley, Bryan and Levering. The B. & O. has become a large factor in the handling of southern produce and fruits for the eastern market.

DOGS IN ALASKA.

The Animals Are Important Factors in the Gold Fields of the Yukon.

The native Yukon dog is much more valuable than the importations from Puget sound, says a Tacoma correspondent in an article about dogs in the northern gold fields. The dogs must be acclimated in order to stand the severities of the winter. It is found that dogs taken from Montana and Dakota endure the Yukon winters with less suffering than those bred in the milder climate of Puget sound. Two splendid specimens of native Alaska dogs were brought here a few days ago, their owner finding it cheaper to pay their passage on the steamer than to have them boarded at Dyea during his trip here for supplies. The animals weigh, one 82 and the other 88 pounds. The larger one cost its owner $117 at Circle City. It is a cross between a dog belonging to a family of missionaries that went to the Yukon years ago and one that hailed from the shores of the Mackenzie river. Both animals are stout, well proportioned and muscled, and have exceptionally short and heavy necks. Their ears are short and lifted like those of the Eskimo dog. Their coats are dark, and the hair, while not close, is smooth and heavy enough to form a comfortable protection against the Arctic winters and the Yukon mosquitoes, by the side of which the ferocity of the New Jersey variety pales into insignificance. A specially prepared dog food made out of meal and coarse meat from the packing houses is now being manufactured in the form of a cracker and seems likely to come into general use.

Buckskin moccasins are provided by many owners to keep the feet of the animals from being worn raw on the ice and snow. They are about nine inches long and made much after the pattern of a child's stocking. Pack saddles are also coming into use this spring. These are so arranged that dogs can carry a weight of from ten to twenty pounds besides drawing a sled. The saddlebags fall on either side, and straps are arranged to prevent the pack from sliding forward or backward.

A Tacoma dealer has built up a large business in the manufacture of dog harness. A suit of harness usually weighs 2½ pounds. The collar is made to slip over the dog's head, obviating the necessity of buckling it about the animal's neck when the driver's hands are cold and numb. The collar is made of leather faced with sheepskin and stuffed with deer hair. The hames are inclosed in the collar, and attached to them are buckles for fastening the traces. On each collar are placed rings to which the traces of a dog in the lead may be attached, making it easy to drive teams in tandem. Traces in the harness for native dogs are made of heavy web material, because the dogs eat the leather harness. They devour the collars on sight if permitted to do so. This peculiar craving makes it necessary to keep the animals separated when harnessed, so that they shall not masticate one another's collars. When the web traces become oily the dogs chew even them, and it is only a matter of time when the web trappings become food for the hungry creatures.—N. Y. Sun.

THE SHANS.

Interesting Inhabitants of the Region Between Burmah and China.

The Shans, like all uncivilized peoples, are an interesting race. They inhabit the mountainous regions between Burmah and the frontier states of the Chinese empire. To the west of them lie the great plains of Burmah proper, watered by the Irrawaddy; to the north and east lies the province of Yunnan, and to the south are the Karen hills and Siam. The river Salwin flows through the country. To the west of it are great rolling grassy downs, 3,000 to 5,000 feet above sea level, backed by wooded hills which rise in places to 9,000 feet in height. To the east of the river the country is broken up into a confused mass of forest-clad hills and narrow valleys, with here and there a small oasis until the large plain of Keng-Tung is reached, and behind it the mountains, and behind the mountains the river Mekong.

There is a tradition among the Shans that they once held an ancient and mighty kingdom in the north of the present Burmah empire. The race is widely diffused, and is probably the most numerous of the Indo-Chinese races. They are found from the borders of Maniapore to the center of Yunnan and from the valley of Assam in Cambodia and Bangkok. "Everywhere Buddhists, everywhere to a considerable extent civilized, and everywhere speaking the same language." The kingdom of Siam is now the only independent Shan state; the others are tributary to it, or to Burmah or China.

In the criminal law there is an admixture of the Jewish and Teutonic: the relatives of a murdered man or woman may take 300 reals, or they may demand life for life. Dacoity (highway robbery) is a capital offense; so also is the theft of valuable property, and in the case of the lowest and poorest death is awarded even for petty thefts. A man's relatives are responsible for his misdeeds, "and in the case of horse or cattle theft or for dacoity a whole village or even a small township is laid under contribution should the immediate relatives fail to pay the required compensation."—Journal of the Anthropological Institute.

"I am going to take my money out of the Solidstone bank," said the man who is a slave to a belief in signs.

ASTRONOMERS AT WAR.

Director Holden and Prof. Hussey, of Lick Observatory, at Odds.

Trouble Starts with the Resignation of Prof. Barnard—Efforts Look-ing to Reconciliation to Be Made.

Director Holden and Prof. Hussey, of Lick Observatory, are at odds. A peace commission is already on its way to the scene of hostilities, headed by Judge C. W. Slack and directed by the regents, to hear their grievances, to arbitrate their differences if possible, and if not, to recommend some course that will restore harmony among the astronomers. Timothy Guy Phelps will probably assist in the investigation. Gov. Budd was to have been present, but was recalled to Sacramento on business.

The difficulty began with the inability of Prof. Holden and his subordinates to agree. After the resignation of Prof. Barnard, Holden recommended Prof. Hussey, of Stanford university, for the vacancy. At first Hussey refused, but afterwards he reconsidered and accepted the offer. The new astronomer declares that Prof. Holden told him he was to take Barnard's place and go on with Barnard's work.

Director Holden has represented to Judge Slack and others of the regents that Hussey was never employed under any such agreement.

Judge Slack is anxious to compromise the matter if possible. He thinks both men may be satisfied, and hopes to prevent any breach of the peace, though the two men have not had written communication with each other for some time and affairs are quite as frigid on top of the mountains as they were during Barnard's residence there.

TO EXPLORE HUDSON BAY.

Canadian Government Expedition Will Soon Sail in the Diana.

The steamer Diana, which will carry the government expedition to Hudson bay, arrived at Halifax, N. S., the other day from St. Johns, N. E., and will be provisioned at once for her long sojourn in the north. The Diana is a fine steamer for ice work, and was specifically selected on that account. The scientific party and the ship's crew will make the number on board over 50. The exploration of Hudson straits is expected to be the most far-reaching in results of any yet attempted. The purpose of the expedition is to discover the period for which Hudson straits are navigable, in order that grain steamers may run through and load wheat from England at Fort Churchill, which will be the terminus of a railway to be built there from Manitoba. In addition to the various scientific investigations which will be made there will also be an attempt to learn the fishing possibilities of this vast body of water. The steamer will, if possible, leave here about May 20, go around by the front of Newfoundland, and proceed north to her destination, taking her chances of working in through the ice. If all goes well, she will return about the end of October.

MAIL BOXES ON STREET CARS.

Unique Experiment Tried by Postal Authorities at Des Moines.

An interesting experiment is being made by the postal authorities at Des Moines, Ia.

All the street cars have been provided with letter boxes, and the cars stop to permit persons to mail letters. These stops are made wherever the cars would ordinarily stop to take on passengers.

Des Moines is especially fitted for this sort of mail collection. All the street cars in town are operated by one company and all pass the post office or very near it. All the lines center at a terminus in the heart of the city and radiate from it.

The population of the city is widely scattered, and this method of collecting the mail seems to be the only satisfactory system that the people have had.

The experiment is due to the persistence of Postmaster Edward W. Hunter. The service was established April 19, and thus far has proved to be all that Mr. Hunter claimed for it.

Chesapeake and Ohio Ry.'s New Entrance To New York.

One of the greatest improvements ever made for the convenience of passengers to and from New York City has just been completed. A new highspeed Ferry service has been established from big Jersey City depot to the 10th or 23rd street in New York City, which will get you to New York in less time, with comfortable waiting rooms, baggage room, and all conveniences of a modern Depot.

The Ferry runs between Jersey City and 23rd street, just from the ship builder, and all that can be embodied in modern up-to-date passenger steamers. They are large "double deckers," and the landings on both sides of the river are so constructed that passengers can get off and on at both docks at once, thus saving the trouble and annoyance of going up or down a crowded stairway.

In connection with the 23rd street station, a line of omnibus and busses has been established that will take passengers to or from any part of New York City, a charge of 2 cents per passenger for a mile and a half or under, and 15 cents for each additional mile or fraction of a mile, with 10 cents extra for four wheel carriages or 10 cents each. The charge for passenger in four wheel carriages is 40 cents on same distance basis as hansom. Valises are taken charge of by driver in either hansom or carriage at 15 cents each; no charge for valises carried in hand.

This new station is in addition to the Courtland and DeBrosses street stations these are still in use for persons going direct to the lower business and residential parts of New York City, but for persons desiring to go first to the hotel district the 23rd street station fills every need landing passengers only a few blocks from Fifth Avenue and Broadway. Every morning and evening there are easy reaches. Passengers leaving Lexington on the Chesapeake and Ohio Limited Vestibuled trains have the comfort of riding through sleepers to New York without change, making from three to five hours quicker time than via other lines.

Leave Lexington 11:25 a. m. and 8:50 p. m. daily.

Arrive 23rd. St. N. Y. City, 12:50 a. m. and 9:15 p. m. daily.
